

Applied Logistics, MPS (Toronto)

The Master of Professional Studies in Applied Logistics is designed to prepare students to be agile in the changing warehousing and distribution industry. As a central pillar of the program, students study how to handle challenges that arise quickly and develop leadership and project management skills to help communicate to customers, avoid reactionary responses, work collaboratively to find a solution, and effectively communicate across the supply chain and with customers. By integrating systems thinking with training in the technical applications in logistics, students have an opportunity to gain well-rounded experience that allows them to understand and adapt to strategic imperatives while also being able to execute in detail. The program aims to develop proficiency in descriptive analytics and the use of real-time data to optimize routing among distribution centers and fulfill orders in response to changing customer profiles, shifting product sales, disruptions in the supplier network, and customer demand for packaging changes.

Program Requirements

Beginning with students admitted in the fall of 2026, all students pursuing on-ground master's degree programs must complete a university-level experiential learning requirement. This requirement may be fulfilled through the curriculum, co-op, or other work- or industry-integrated learning experiences.
