

Managing Human Capital, Minor

The managing human capital minor is designed to deepen students' knowledge and skills that are necessary to attract, retain, develop, lead, and manage employees. Employees of a firm constitute fundamental resources whose expertise provide economic value to a firm. Thus, the effective management of human capital is instrumental to an organization's success. Organizations are seeking new ways of managing the challenges they face— globalization, economic changes, rapidly developing technology, union-management relations, and changing demographics in the workplace. Managers and human resources professionals use a wide range of methods for ensuring that their employees and organizations are competitive and high performing.

Managing human capital is a significant component of the strategic management of an organization. The courses offered in the managing human capital minor expose students to the major issues and challenges in leading and managing a global and increasingly diverse workforce in an increasingly digital world.
